

up-gradation of toilets, and construction of pilot women and girls' toilets are being implemented in schools in the federal capital.

This was revealed by Minister of State for Information, Broadcasting and National Heritage Marriyum Aurangzeb while speaking at a ceremony held here at a local girls college under 'Sehatmand Pakistan, Hamarey Hath Hamara Mustiqbil' with regard to global day of hand washing.

The minister said the teachers and parents should become part of the awareness campaign concerning 'Sehatmand Pakistan, Hand Washing and Usefulness of Water'. She said the government or any institu-

She said that all issues pertaining to health would have to be tackled to make the future generations safe and healthy adding that healthy children would make a happy family. Through this ceremony the ministries of Climate change, Education, Health, CADD, Information and Broadcasting, other institutions and partners were promoting hand washing for a 'Sehatmand Pakistan' and healthcare.

The minister said besides being Minister for Information, she was also representing the Sustainable Development Goals Secretariat.

Marriyum informed the audience that the government sick he does not go to school and when an adult becomes indisposed he does not go to office or undertake other normal activities which affects overall performance of the country."

The MOS said that PTV and Radio Pakistan were telecasting and broadcasting programmes for the awareness of the parents regarding prevention of diseases among children, the need for hand washing and issues like usefulness of clean drinking water. If the schoolchildren learned how to wash their hands they could secure themselves against a number of diseases. The schools must also continue taking practical steps for health and cleanliness, she regards to sustainable development goals.

Marriyum said Pakistan's parliament was the first legislature that had established a full-fledged secretariat for SDGS which was playing an active role in this regard. The SDGS secretariat was exercising oversight on the national development projects and the Ministry of Planning, Development and Reforms also had a special SGDS unit, she added.

She said that at the provincial level also SDGS centres had been established. The achievement of SDGS, she added, was Pakistan's international obligation and the government was firmly committed to the attaining of those goals through its political and economic strategies.

Marriyum said that the achievement of SDGS was only possible through public-private partnership. The SDGS were also part of the vision 2025. Like other countries who were benefiting from public-private partnership Pakistan had also started working on similar lines which had already started paying dividends, she added.

The minister said that Punjab Chief Minister Shehbaz Sharif had done tremendous work in all the areas setting a worth emulating example for other provinces.

She said that the children were being sensitized on the need for hand washing and clean water and the teachers and parent were playing a very significant role in creating awareness. A public awareness campaign about drainage related issues had also been unleashed. She said that different sources and avenues were being used for awareness of parents in regards to health of the children. She said that the provincial government were also focusing on resolving problems pertaining to health, education, drainage and other issues. The media had a pivotal role in creating awareness about the social issues and it should continue that through its programmes.

Minister of State Marriyum Aurangzeb, Minister for Professional Education Engineer Baligh ur Rehman, Advisor on Prime Minister's Education Reform programme Ali Raze, students and those participating in the ceremony on the occasion made a pledge to promote hand washing for health care.—APP
